| Definition: The total number of redevelopment jobs leveraged by the U.S. EPA cooperative agreement at the property. This number also includes short-term jobs (i.e., with a duration of less than one year) typically leveraged during the construction stage and long-term jobs that typically occur as a result of the new or enhance reuse at the property (i.e., with a duration of more than one year). Only actual jobs should be reported; planned or unexpected jobs should not be reported until they are realized. | | | | |
| Redevelopment Readiness Certification | | State and Local Climate and Energy Program Glossary of Terms | Glossary and Key Word List | |
| Definition: Older communities that have lost people and jobs can increase the likelihood of redevelopment by updating codes and development regulations, streamlining their development review process, and making their planning process more predictable. States can support this reform by certifying communities as "Redevelopment Ready," providing a stamp of approval that can attract developers. | | | | |
